Case Western Reserve University School of Law

Roundtrip Shuttles provided

3:00 – 5:30 PM Jay Healey Teaching Session: Poverty Simulation

This highly experiential session offers the Poverty Simulation, in which participants take on the roles of family members who face significant, yet typical, challenges that are the day-to-day experience of people living in poverty. The simulation engages participants directly in issues of health equity, income inequality, bias, and the institutional systems and structures that disadvantage the poor, and it offers a means through which to introduce broader discussions about law, policy, and the social determinants of health.

Co-Conveners:

Laura E. McNally-Levine, Case Western Reserve University School of Law

Ross D. Silverman, Indiana University Richard M. Fairbanks School of Public Health

Charity Scott, Georgia State University College of Law

Dayna Bowen Matthew, University of Virginia School of Law
