The 2021 American Journal of Law and Medicine symposium will be titled, Reproductive Health Policy. Panels will discuss legal issues in reproductive justice. Priority will be given to papers that discuss inequalities in access to care, alternative reproductive technologies, and the future of abortion access in light of the conservative-leaning U.S. Supreme Court. This is an open call for papers from any academic perspective, including, but not limited to, law, public health, medicine, economics, bioethics, history, and anthropology.

Accepted papers will be published in the Symposium Edition and presented at the symposium at Boston University in January 2022. Please send a one-page abstract, as well as complete contact information and a resume/CV, to ajlm@bu.edu by August 13, 2021. Selected authors will be notified in early fall 2021, following a peer-review process. Full-length articles must be submitted by December 10, 2021 for inclusion in the symposium. Completed articles must be no longer than 7,000 words, including citations, and must touch on reproductive health. AJLM pays for reasonable travel expenses of invited authors.
